The center of this quilt was pieced in the late 90's from a variety of old sewing project fabrics, mostly clothing. Other fabrics were purchases from my cruising of the flat fold tables at Northwest Fabrics in the East Dale Mall. I was inspired by Roberta Horton's 1986 book Calico and Beyond The Use of Patterned Fabric in Quilts. I've kept the fabric's used on the center section separate from my stash for all these years. I recently added the border and completed the quilt. It is machine quilted by me. 76" x 88"

Service 1—One of my retirement goals is to make service quilts, I'm not doing so well but I hope to improve. This pattern I spotted on my Instagram feed, it is called Tiny Tiles. I won two nice fat quarters during our first Zoom meeting. I used them to pull other fabrics from my stash. It is backed with a yardage of Linzee McCray's fabric line Flowers for Freya, so soft! It is machine quilted by me.
53" x 60"

I think this will be my last quilt where I paper piece a portion of a large star on the quilts edge or in a corner. This was made for my brother and sister in-law's 35th wedding anniversary. It is machine pieced, hand quilted. 80" x 80"
